

How this issue even got to the proposal phase is beyond me. Why would the same government agency that sets laws restricting harmful interference of other devices be considering a project that would interfere with millions of pieces of electronic equipment? I think someone there needs to read Part 15 again!